AgencySUBJECT: 1984 Stockpile/Industrial Mobilization Planning
Study: Briefing Materials (U)

Attached please find briefing materials for use by your staffs on the 1984 study. As noted in Robert C. McFarlane's memorandum forwarding the stockpile NSDD, no mention of this change of policy should be made outside the Executive Branch until after the White House has had a chance to brief concerned Senators and Congressmen, and release an official statement, and the State Department has informed Embassies of the changes. After this has taken place, agency policy-level staff may use the attached material for the following purposes:

Tab A: Secret Briefing on the 1984 Study

Use: Briefings to agency staff on a strict need-to-know basis.

Tab B: Unclassified Statement of Policy

Use: Background to press and Congress on an as requested basis.

Tab C: Unclassified and Confidential Q's and A's

Use: Background to the press (unclassified material) and to Congress on an as requested basis in response to direct questions. (C)

This material is designed to be inclusive. For the President's new stockpile/mobilization policy to be successful, it is incumbent on each agency to ensure that their responses to questions on the 1984 study reflect these approved briefing materials. This process will ensure coordinated Administration responses to questions or inquiries regarding the 1984 study and the President's policy in this area. Each agency should inform the NSC of Congressional or significant press inquiries. (C)

Due to the complexity of the NSC study and the broad agency involvement, all Congressional briefings on the new stockpile policy will be handled by interagency briefing teams made up of agencies who developed particular parts of the study. This process will be coordinated by the NSC. The release of written materials or reports pertaining to the NSC study to Congress will be coordinated with the NSC in advance. (C)

Robert M. Kimmitt
Executive Secretary
